Laguna Amarga

"Pioneer estancia in the conservation of the puma"

Laguna Amarga is home to one of the largest concentrations of pumas in Chilean Patagonia and offers visitors a unique chance to observe these animals in their natural environment, surrounded by beautiful mountains, lakes, and steppes. This is also why Laguna Amarga is a favorite destination for many wildlife documentary productions like BBC and Netflix.

Come and enjoy the unique experience of a lifetime in the Land of the Pumas

Estancia Laguna Amarga is a family ranch located right next to the borders of the Eighth Wonder of the World, the Torres del Paine National Park.

Originally, the main activity was sheep farming, but today, we have decided to dedicate most of this beautiful land to conservation, leaving more than 17,320 acres to what we today call "The Land of the Pumas". This area is not only home to the biggest feline in Chile, but to many other local species, like the guanaco, skunks, foxes, armadillos, flamingos, rheas, and more than 50 types of birds.

Our estancia is the ideal destination for photographers and naturalists who love nature, and wish to see pumas in their natural habitat, wonderful Patagonian landscapes, different species of fauna, and learn more about the conservation of these animals.

At Leona Amarga Expedition, we offer a variety of activities on our estancia, all conducted by our dedicated family team, ensuring your ultimate wildlife experience.

To carry out puma-watching activities, we created Leona Amarga Expedition, a locally owned and operated agency, offering a variety of activities on our estancia, all conducted by our dedicated family team, ensuring your ultimate wildlife experience.

Location

Estancia Laguna Amarga is located just before the East entrance to the national park, Torres del Paine, and is gifted with the impressive view of the three famous towers. This entire area is part of the Southernmost region of Chilean Patagonia, the Magallanes region, and where we operate is located 90 km from Puerto Natales.

The landscape of the property is a mix between Patagonian steppe and conglomerates. On the property, we have various lagoons, like the 23 km long Sarmiento lagoon, and two smaller, the Amarga and Goic lagoons.

Together with the view of the mountain range of Torres del Paine, these landscapes make a beautiful setting for photograph.

You will learn how we search for the pumas, and the signs in the field we are looking for or listening to, to have an idea of where to look for the puma. Your puma expert will tell you about the behavior of the puma, how the conservation work here, and how to approach it in a manner, that doesn't interfere with the natural behavior of the puma, always keeping a proper distance from it.

Summer: Patagonian summer days are long, with an early sunrise starting around 4.30 in the morning. When the first rays of the sun start to appear is when the puma is most active, and we will therefore start around 4.30 - 5.00 AM, waiting to hear from our puma tracker, who will be in the field searching for puma activities. After 3,5 hours in the field, we will head back to our accommodation to take a break, get lunch, and relax before the afternoon activity.

Around 4.30 PM we will go back to the field to search for pumas while enjoying the mesmerizing landscapes. After another 3,5 hours, we will return to our accommodation to have dinner and relax.

Winter: The daylight hours are shorter, and we will be leaving later in the morning, depending on the month. In the afternoon, we will be leaving earlier. During the shortest days of the year, we might stay in the field and enjoy our lunch there.
