Greeting and Blessing:

I duly received your letter, and to reply to it in the same sequence, I, first of all, send my prayerful wishes to Dr. Rosenbloom on the occasion of his birthday, and wish you both a year of Hatzlocho materially and spiritually, which go hand in hand together. But, for the Jews, the spiritual must predominate over the material. This is the case also with every true scientist, particularly the scientist whose field of interest is in the abstract rather than the experimental sciences, and certainly this is the way of a Jew, who belongs to a people called a "holy nation" and "one nation on earth". The latter, according to the Alter Rebbe's explanation, alludes to the quality of the Jew and of the Jewish people to reveal the oneness and true Divine unity even in "earthly" matters.

I was gratified to note that your daughter and her husband are coming to spend Pesach with you, and I wish you all a Kosher and joyous festival.

I read with interest the lines about your son David. I am enclosing a letter for him herewith, and if it requires further elaboration, I trust you will find the proper words to explain it to him.

To conclude in the spirit of the beginning, I again wish you both a year of Hatzlocho and a Kosher and inspiring Festival of our Freedom.

With blessing,

M. Schneerson
