

Destroy Your Ego

How do you get paid as a writer?

You need to sell yourself. Consider yourself a client and start writing for yourself.

Ego is the enemy. You can get paid to be a writer in the business world.

When you think that you deserve something or the world owes you something. That's when you need to destroy your ego.

"The market has spoken, you're not as good as you think you are, and that's ok!"

You're just getting started, you have to go from this idea of where you think you are, and start back from scratch.

One of the core values of Virtual Worker Now is to sharpen the saw. You have to always make yourself better.

Dunning Kruger Effect: We think we're better than we are.

You're making so many gains so quickly that you think you're amazing.

Stop overestimating how good you are because you made some rapid progress at the beginning.

Always keep learning, read copywriting books, keep in mind that you're always a beginner, even if you're a master.

If you get a small win, you might stagnate if you're not destroying your ego.

Plus,

If you have humility, clients will want to work with you more.

Questions:

Should you object to negative feedback as soon as it's given to you?

Did you suffer from a beginner's mindset?
