Kata Kata is an authentic African cartoon magazine with both online and printed versions. Humorously, Kata Kata tries to discuss and sensitize typical African / global socio-political issues using cartoons. At the same time, it equally offers a maxim that life is perhaps not all about seriousness; one needs some laughs and relaxation to face serious challenges in life. The duality of Kata Kata is such that it, on the one hand, discusses serious issues and at the same time, it offers therapy for the problems through laughter.

In an educational, informative and yet humorous way, Kata Kata creates awareness of social problems through the dissemination of information and finds solutions to them. This important information can be sent across in many major languages (English, French, Spanish, Portuguese) as well as / or different African languages, to reach the grass-root audiences.

The quarterly printed edition of Kata Kata is widely available in the Netherlands and some European countries. Equally, the magazine can be read or borrowed from different libraries globally, including the prestigious Stanford University Library, USA, Federal Library Den Haag, (the Netherlands), University of Leiden Library -African Studies (Netherlands), University of Iowa (Main Library), USA, Southern Africa Library, Basel, Switzerland etc.

Likewise, the digital version of Kata Kata can also be read online or subscribed to via Kata Kata website or Magzter, the world's largest digital newsstand with more than 20 million readers.

Publisher's note: That Symbolic Lesson of Difference

Humanity is entangled in the web of fragmentation and dichotomy; we assess, judge, segregate and interact with individuals based on our assumed differences in their identity and characteristics - race, gender, sexual orientation, religion, education, and ideology. To achieve our divisive discourse, we often create a symbolic world, which explains the order of things and how and why things are the way they are. That figurative or allusive world gives meanings and legitimacy to our actions, more or less.

The reality is that we are products and victims of interwoven and interdependent existence. We live because others exist; we hardly can separate our peaceful co-existence from the liberty of others. That makes equality the heartbeat of freedom, without which there is no liberty. The identity of our ultimate interests arises from equality of rights; you can't deny or destroy your neighbour's rights without effectively endangering yours. Hence, we can argue that our rights and liberties are interwoven; the rights of others determine mine.

When Mary McCarthy states that in science, all facts, no matter how trivial or banal, enjoy democratic equality, it poses a challenge to human society in their interactions with others they consider different. Differences are not alien unless we make them so.

Take a look at the issues of homosexuality, which many Africans and other emerging countries deprecate and consider a strange behaviour or cultural abnormality. On the other hand, their Western counterparts are more tolerant and open to gay relationships.

While research has proven that biological variables that begin before birth have a role in sexual orientation, it is clear that people do not choose to whom they are attracted. Therapy, treatment, or persuasion cannot alter a person's sexual orientation. As a result, it's reasonable to argue that you can't "change" or "convert" a person into a gay. Furthermore, like in human society, it is scientifically proved that homosexuality exists in the animal kingdom. If we accept that one's sexual orientation is a natural part of who one is - not a choice - it becomes reasonable to make tolerance a cornerstone for harmonious co-existence.

Likewise, while polygamy is a normal and acceptable practice in many African societies, that is not the case in the West. Interestingly, both gay and polygamy relationships have one thing in common - love. Though some might wonder why one might be antagonistic about love between two adults, which does not hurt others, others might denounce the West for fighting against gay discrimination, which Africans and some developing worlds might consider "alien" and "abnormal" to their cultures, while unapologetically practising their polygamous relations, which is alien to the West.

As Albert Einstein right said, "Before God, we are all equally wise, and equally foolish." Who are we to judge or throw the first stone?

The fundamental law of any religion and humanity is love - unconditional love! If that love exists amongst us, it creates light, which beams tolerance and leads to peaceful co-existence.

That is the gist of that symbolic lesson of difference.
