Kata Kata is an authentic African cartoon magazine with both online and printed versions. Humorously, Kata Kata tries to discuss and sensitize typical African / global socio-political issues using cartoons. At the same time, it equally offers a maxim that life is perhaps not all about seriousness; one needs some laughs and relaxation to face serious challenges in life. The duality of Kata Kata is such that it, on the one hand, discusses serious issues and at the same time, it offers therapy for the problems through laughter.

In an educational, informative and yet humorous way, Kata Kata creates awareness of social problems through the dissemination of information and finds solutions to them. This important information can be sent across in many major languages (English, French, Spanish, Portuguese) as well as / or different African languages, to reach the grass-root audiences.

The quarterly printed edition of Kata Kata is widely available in the Netherlands and some European countries. Equally, the magazine can be read or borrowed from different libraries globally, including the prestigious Stanford University Library, USA, Federal Library Den Haag, (the Netherlands), University of Leiden Library -African Studies (Netherlands), University of Iowa (Main Library), USA, Southern Africa Library, Basel, Switzerland etc.

Likewise, the digital version of Kata Kata can also be read online or subscribed to via Kata Kata website or Magzter, the world's largest digital newsstand with more than 20 million readers.

Publisher's note: Addressing the Over- population Challenges.

Having a kid is viewed in many cultures as a blessing, and having many children is seen as a gift from God. Thus, the proverb "God gives children." However, with the world population surging to 8 billion, up from 5 billion in 1987, that phrase and belief have come under intense scrutiny. The world's population rose from just 1 billion people in hundreds of thousands of years to 8 billion people in just 200 years.

Around 8.5 billion people are projected to live on Earth in 2030, 9.7 billion in 2050, and 10.9 billion in 2100. The world population is increasing by 83 million people yearly at the current pace of growth.

That alarming figure comes with challenges.

On July 11, World Population Day, we should emphasise the significance of global population concerns, significantly raising public awareness of the effects of the rapidly expanding human population.

We have substantial cause to be concerned about the effects of overcrowding, even as we celebrate humankind. Population-related issues include many topics, such as family planning, gender equality, environmental impacts, and human rights challenges.

According to the latest data, Africa's population is expanding while Europe's is declining. There are weighty reasons to be concerned about overpopulation and to take immediate action to stabilise it.

We all are inescapable from the dangers of a high population.

Overpopulation may result in severe food shortages, poverty, and decreased access to health and educational services; water and sanitation impact employment, income distribution, and other economic trends. All these challenges associated with overpopulation call for urgent attention to family planning.

Fertility rates and life spans have changed as a result of family planning. Women had less than 2.5 children per woman by 2015, down from an average of 4.5 children per woman in the early 1970s.

We must pay close attention to the high population rate to accomplish social and economic growth, decent health care, sanitation, water, and education, as well as more employment and improved income distribution.

Kata Kata Village is doing everything possible to combat overpopulation concerns and contribute to the heroic fight for a better world. Be part of it.
