Marvel Studios released Shang-Chi, the newest movie in the Marvel Cinematic Universe. Shang-Chi features Simu Liu, a Chinese-Canadian actor. Simu Liu has worked in movies and shows such as Pacific Rim, Blood and Water, and Kim's Convenience. Shang-Chi is the first MCU movie to feature an Asian protagonist.

Did anyone see Shang Chi yet? If so, I want to know your thoughts and what this means for the APIDA community?!

Steven

It was amazing to see actual Asian actors, not serving just as the "token minority". It's always refreshing to see Asian actors, but Shang-Chi took that to a whole new level. The Asian cultures were there and it felt natural! I forgot what it was like to be "comfortable" with culture, but Shang-Chi is definitely a step in the right direction.

I've only watched it once and haven't had a chance to watch it with a critical eye yet, but I loved how aspects of my Taiwanese-American upbringing was reflected in the movie. However, hands down my favorite had to be the fight scenes between Shang-Chi's parents. It was so elegant and beautiful it stole my breath away. I was honestly amazed that I could see something I would normally see in a Chinese Xianxia or Wuxia drama — which I never talk to most people about because no one I knew growing up watched those — on the big screen and see a theater full of people in the US enjoying it too.

Xavier

I love this movie! I've seen it in the theatres twice. During each of the fight scenes, it would remind me of watching martial arts movies growing up and how I would pretend to fight like they did when I was a kid. Even now, I just had the same tendencies and I wanted to fight with them too! As a huge marvel fan, this has been a great start to Phase 4 and an origin story. I can't wait for what's next!
