SKI IN THE DESERT? IT COULD ONLY HAPPEN IN DUBAI ...

Rob Orchard and Marcus Webb check out this season's hottest new ski resort

It's 35 degrees outside and it's just started to snow. Not content with temperature-controlled beaches and a manmade archipelago, the sun-baked emirate of Dubai has decided to introduce Alpine weather into the desert. 7.1. F Two weeks ahead of its scheduled opening date of 2 December, we have been invited for a sneak preview.

As we pass through the entrance a rush of glacial wind pushes itself to the base of our lungs and we feel the crunch of fresh snow underfoot. 7.2. E Two young men having a snowball fight, fir trees hanging heavy with frost and a handful of black-coated visitors trudging up a steep, snow-white hill like a pack of penguins. Central to this snapshot of wintry perfection are two Emiratis in white robes kneeling in eight inches of powder, letting snow run through their fingers and giggling at the sheer insanity of it all.

Even in this endlessly ambitious city, taking temperatures of up to 45°C down to below zero seemed crazy. 7.3. A It's currently engaged in a number of surreal super projects: building the first ever underwater hotel; constructing a theme park that's larger than the city itself; and erecting the tallest tower in the world - the Burj Dubai, whose height is a closely guarded secret. Next year will see the opening of the Palm Island project, a vast manmade archipelago stretching into the Persian Gulf. For Dubai, 'moderation' is a dirty word.

Ski Dubai juts out of the Mall of the Emirates - the largest shopping centre outside the States - like a giant metallic elbow. Just off Dubai's main motorway, the tube-like structure is far from pretty, an unusual blip in this aesthetically conscious city. 7.4. D Craning our necks to take in the cavernous 22,500 square metre space, we trudge around mountains and igloos to the foot of the complex's five-slope arena. Unlike the snow park - the ski-free area at the foot of the hill - the slopes are not yet open to the public and the sight of this pristine white carpet sweeping upwards and out of view is eerie and intimidating. 7.5. C Yet within a fortnight this virgin snow will be being carved up by 1,500 skiers and snowboarders.

We reach the mid-point smiling but out of breath. It's home to the Avalanche Cafe, a balconied chalet which will soon be warming weary skiers with fondue, hot chocolate and the dubious pleasures of non-alcoholic mulled wine. For now this is as far as we are allowed to go, but around the corner, at the very top of the 85-metre high building, lies Ski Dubai's longest run.

Abridged from: www.travel.guardian.co.uk

- A. But this is a city that refuses to be limited by such trifling matters as logic, physics or geography.
- B. Thankfully, once Ski Dubai is open the snowmaking sessions will take place only during the night.
- C. As we trudge past abandoned snowmobiles and a colossal chairlift hung with icicles, the feeling is more ice-age apocalypse than hot new resort.
- D. But inside it's a wonder.
- E. Before us lies a scene ripped straight from a Christmas card.
- F. The location of this meteorological oddity is Ski Dubai, the third largest indoor slope in the world.

I come home from work and my husband David almost skips out of his office to greet me. "Look, Brenda," he says, and then proceeds to bow at me vigorously, as if I were the Queen. "What?"

"My back. I don't feel anything. Not a twinge."

"Did you go to see Dan Silverman?" Dan Silverman is an osteopath that we recommend at the surgery, and I've been telling David to see him for months. Years, probably.

"No."

"So what happened?"

"I saw someone else."

"Who?"

"This guy in Finsbury Park."

"In Finsbury Park?" Dan Silverman has a practice in Harley Street. There is no Harley Street equivalent in Finsbury Park, as far as I know. "How did you find him?"

"Newsagent's window."

"A newsagent's window? What qualifications has he got?"

"None whatsoever." Information delivered with a great deal of pride and aggression, inevitably. Medical qualifications belong on my side of the great marital divide, and are therefore to be despised.

"So you let someone completely unqualified mess around with your back. Smart decision, David. He's probably crippled you for life."

David starts to bow again. "Do I look like someone who's been crippled?"
"Not today, no. But nobody can cure a bad back in one session."
"Yeah, well. GoodNews has."
"What good news?"
"That's his name. GoodNews. Capital G, capital N, all one word. DJ GoodNews, actually. To give him his full title."
"DJ Not Dr."
"It's, you know, a clubby thing. I think he used to work in a disco or something."
"Always useful when you're treating back complaints. Anyway, out of interest, what did his advert say?"
"Something like, I don't know. 'Bad Back? I can cure you in one session.' And then his telephone number."
"And that impressed you?"
"Yeah. Of course. Why mess around?"
"I'm presuming this GoodNews person isn't some sort of alternative therapist."
"I don't know what you'd call him."
"Did he give you drugs?"
"No."
"I thought that was your definition of alternative. Someone who doesn't give you drugs."
"The point is, he's fixed me."
"So what did this guy do?"
"Just rubbed my back a bit with some Deep Heat and sent me on my way. Ten minutes."
"How much?"
"Two hundred quid."
I look at him. "You're kidding."
