What to Bring

Please seek to bring the following with you on the day of the tournament:

- Gaming tools such as tape measure, dice, objective markers, etc. Alternatively we sell them at the store, tell our staff in advance or during registration.
- Accessible rules copy, this can be done via the Warhammer Age of Sigmar app, and the latest FAQ published to check during the game.

Army Requirements

To reflect the beginner friendly nature of this tournament, there are no painting requirements. We love a good hobby army...so conversions are encourage but please run any that you may be concerned do not actively represent the model past the TO. We would ask that you do not use models to “count as” other models, but if you wish to please contact the TO to discuss.

The Draw and Scoring

The first round will be randomized, with the next rounds following a Swiss system. This system will go in the following order explained below. The draw will be made on the morning of the tournament after check in.

Players will be ranked and paired based upon the following metrics:

- Game Results W/L/D
- Victory Points
- Battle Tactics

- Strength of Schedule

Both players are responsible for ensuring that the submitted results for their game are accurate. Once the pairings for the following round or the final tournament results have been generated results will not be changed for any reason other than foul play.

The TO

The TO for the event is Dominic Stonebridge (@TROGGHAMMER). The TO is there to provide rule support and handle queries at the tabletop. Ideally, players will be able to resolve any disputes but always feel free to call the TO over to help.

If you reach a position where you believe you may not finish the game and are not able to agree on a dice down approach, please call the TO over to support with reaching a satisfactory conclusion.

This is a beginner friendly tournament and, as reflected in the London scene, we expect a real range of experience and player skill. The TO is always on hand to support those newer to the game, but we ask that you also support each other with the rules of the game!
