

Welcome to the Starting Line!

Welcome to the 2022-23 track and field season! The Starting Line central hub within RQ+ provides a platform where we can continue to educate, inform, and update NCAA track and field officials as we strive to grow and improve the sport of track and field. Registration for “The Starting Line” opens July 18, 2022. Please go to refquest.com to register.

Please visit the Starting Line central hub frequently to stay current on the latest NCAA track and field officiating news and information. On the central hub, you'll be able to read the latest rules interpretations from the secretary-Rules Editor and bulletins from the National Officials Assignor, complete your additional requirements to be considered for NCAA championship assignments, and other educational information.

Once you have registered on RQ+, you will need to complete the track resumé form. You will be able to access the form by clicking “RQ Forms” from the menu bar at the top of the Starting Line central hub and then choosing “View Forms”. When completing the form, please note the following:

- Please be sure to complete all resume sections.
- Select your area by preference (This will be taken into consideration when selections are made.).
- You will not be selected for an officiating duty you did not choose.
- Select the event you are available and willing to officiate, by preference (This will be taken into consideration when selections are made.).
- You will not be selected for an event you did not choose.

The form must be completed by September 30, 2022.

The deadline to complete all necessary eligibility requirements for selection consideration for 2023 NCAA track and field championships is September 30, 2022. Final selections for the eight DI, DII and DIII indoor and outdoor track and field championship events will be announced in mid to late December.

I am happy you have chosen to register with the NCAA. Thank you for being a critical part of the track and field officiating program. If you have ideas or suggestions for improvement, please email me at mdonley@ku.edu.

I look forward to a great 2022-23 season!
