Cynthia R. Halatyn believes there's always a more efficient way to get things done. She manages operations at Stanton LLP with this mindset. She cut her teeth on local political campaigns, often times working with limited resources while trying to reach the greatest number of voters.

Cynthia eventually transitioned from electoral politics to serve as the Court Coordinator for the 68th Judicial District Court in Dallas County, where she learned the foundations of how the courthouse works. This knowledge translated to a successful stint as a litigation paralegal at Lynn Pinker Cox & Hurst before joining Stanton LLP.

A graduate of Southern Methodist University, Cynthia has combined her background to become known in Dallas political circles and at the courthouse. She is also known around the office for her mixed colloquialisms such as "We'll jump off that bridge when we get to it" and "it's not rocket surgery." A talented musician who spends time off trying to solve the puzzle of indoor rock climbing, Cynthia intends one day to climb Mt. Everest.
