Report of the Event:

Arthvidya – The VIPS Club of Economists organized "The Big Bank Theory" for school and college participants in November 2025. The competition was conducted in multiple structured stages and was designed to assess participants' logical reasoning, financial understanding, and strategic aptitude through distinct formats curated separately for school and college categories. The event witnessed active participation across both levels and was executed in a systematic and well-coordinated manner.

The Preliminary rounds for both School and College categories were held on 18th November 2025 and were conducted virtually through Google Meet. The prelims followed a quiz-based format focused exclusively on logical reasoning. Multiple virtual sessions were organized to ensure smooth coordination, proper monitoring, and effective participation management. The preliminary round served as the qualifying stage for the competition, and based on overall performance in this round, selected teams were shortlisted for advancement to the subsequent stages.

The School finals were conducted on 22nd November 2025 at the VIPS-TC campus. The final round for school participants followed a Monopoly-based format, designed to evaluate students on strategic planning, financial awareness, and decision-making within a structured setting. The finalists demonstrated clarity of thought, discipline, and a strong understanding of financial strategy throughout the round. Based on their final performance in this stage, Hritaansh Kumar from KIIT World School and, Armaan Arora from Rukmini Devi Public School, were declared the winners in the School Category, followed by the first runner-ups, awarded to Rudransh Mahajan and, Satvik Singh from Sachdeva Public School, and the second runner-ups, awarded to Bhavesh Bansal from GD Goenka Public School and, Shourya Bansal from SR Capital SR. SEC. School.

The College Semi-Finals and Finals were conducted on 23rd November 2025. The College Semi-Final round was held across five different virtual meets and was conducted using a board featuring movies and series. This round served as the qualifying stage for the college finals, and teams that met the required performance criteria progressed to the concluding round, which was conducted on the same day.

The College Final round marked the concluding stage of the competition for the college category. The finalists demonstrated consistency in performance, strategic aptitude, and sound financial reasoning throughout the final stage of the event. Upon completion of the final round and evaluation of overall performance, Satvik Upadhyay from Sushant University and Rudrakshi Dogra from VIPS (VSIT) were declared the winners in the College Category, followed by the first runner-ups, awarded to Kritika Gautam & Sanvi Sahni from VIPS (VSBS), and the second runner-ups, awarded to Adit Anand & Vismay Bisht from VIPS (VSJMC).

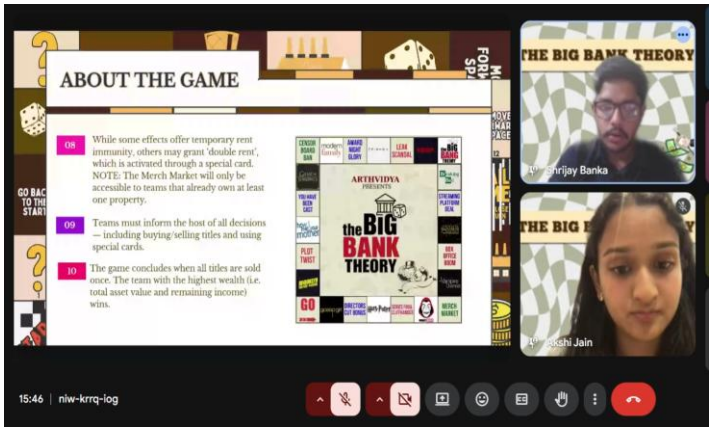

The competition concluded with the formal declaration of results for both the school and college categories. The Big Bank Theory stood as a structured academic initiative aimed at promoting logical reasoning, financial literacy, and strategic awareness among students across both educational levels and was successfully conducted in accordance with the planned format.
