10.) Report of the Event:

Mimansa: The Research Club of VSES hosted an event titled 'Robin Round- Your turn, Your vision' on 17th February 2026, providing students a wide platform to discuss their research ideas and areas of interest. A total of 7 attendees were present. The event commenced with a short welcome of the students who were encouraged to bring out their ideas. Participants presented their research topics briefly followed by an open discussion with the respected professors who actively engaged and guided the students. They provided valuable feedback, suggested relevant sources and literary works to work upon and even pointed out research gaps. This platform allowed students to gain different insights, clarify their doubts and even explore new dimensions. The session was highly interactive with lively exchanges that helped many students to gain clarity. The participants received full guidance and support on how to develop their ideas and take it on further as full research.

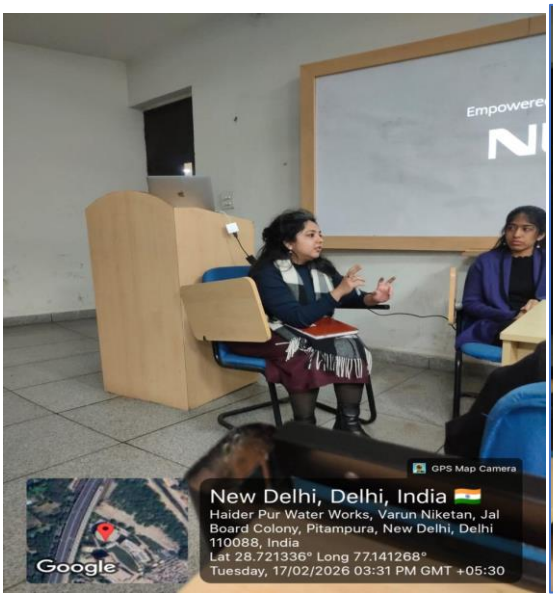

11.) Outcomes:

Overall, the event was highly interactive as professors direct engagement with the students helped them to identify their interests. Many attendees clarified their doubts by realizing potential gap in their research. This event demonstrated a measurable success by fostering critical thinking, facilitating information and even established a strong literary base for the attendees' areas of interest. The active interaction among the students and professors highlights the success of the event.

12.) Challenges and lessons learned:

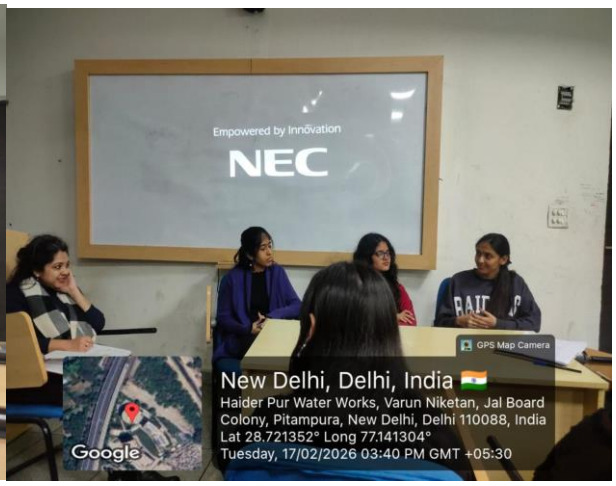

There was low no of attendees due to students' negligence towards importance of guidance session and open discussion and some students came unprepared not able to fully elaborate their ideas however professors constant support and guidance created a comfortable space for attendees which ultimately lead to an successful event.
